FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SeneGence International's The Make Sense Foundation Announces the New Educational Scholarship Program

Irvine, Calif. (May 5, 2015) – The sister non-profit organization of SeneGence, The Make Sense Foundation® is proud to offer scholarship award opportunities for outstanding female youth who are college-bound in 2016 – 2017.

The Make Sense Foundation will proudly award over $10,000 to selected applicant(s). Supporting the educational goals of deserving young women allows the Foundation to continue to give back to communities and support their future success.

“The Make Sense Foundation believes in education and accessibility to all who deserve it,” said CEO and founder of SeneGence International, Joni Rogers- Kante. “Financial means should not be a deterrence to success. The Make Sense Foundation created this program to follow the foundation’s goal, which is to help women and children in need.”

To be an applicant you must be a female living in the U.S. who is preparing to enter college in 2016-2017. The applicant must complete an application and submit an essay. Email msfscholarships@makesensefoundation.org for more information. Top applicants will be contacted for further interviews and winner will be announced April 2016.
